EXPERTISE

My research centers on forecasting the likely ecological and socioeconomic impacts of global climate change on coastal marine ecosystems, and on the creation and testing of products and indicators that are scientifically accurate, understandable, impactful, and useful by a diverse array of stakeholders. I am active in science communication and stakeholder engagement, focused on climate change impacts and societal adaptation to climate change. I also serve as chair of the National Sea Grant Advisory Board, and am interested in the development of national and international environmental policy, including the facilitation of international diplomacy through science.
